Site Plan Review Information

1. An application for Addition plan review is typically reviewed by the Zoning Administrator but, in some instances, may be reviewed by the Board of Zoning Appeals. The Zoning Administrator has the authority to forward any site plan application to the Board of Zoning Appeals for review.
2. The review procedure and criteria are established in Section 154.03(F) of the Tipp City Zoning Code.
3. Approval of a residential addition application does not guarantee any other approvals (e.g., building permits, etc.). The applicant shall be responsible for applying for any other necessary permits or reviews.
4. Answers to any of the project information questions on this application may be answered in the application form and/or on any plans or maps submitted in connection with this application.
